

This avalanche was triggered by a snowboarder who was able to get off the slab safely. It was a recently formed wind slab about 8-10 inches deep, but the notable thing is how wide it broke. It failed on a thin layer of small facets formed during recent cold clear nights and warm sunny days. Photo: GNFAAC

Advisory Region
Northern Madison
Longitude
-111.46W

Latitude
45.27N

Forecast link: GNFAC Avalanche Advisory for Fri Mar 6, 2015GNFAC Avalanche Forecast for Sat Mar 7, 2015

Northern Madison, 2015-03-06